Cultural Precinct designs to tour the city

Residents across the city will be able to picture themselves in the Gold Coast's future Cultural Precinct during a touring exhibition which commences on Monday (24/2).

Drawn from The Reveal curated exhibition which attracted more than 4500 visitors at the Gold Coast City Gallery last November and December, the Gold Coast Cultural Precinct Touring Exhibition 2014 will visit the city's libraries and other venues.

Elanora Library will be the first stop for the Touring Exhibition.

The touring exhibition will tell the story of the international design competition which led to selection of a strikingly colourful and distinctly Gold Coast winning design by ARM Architecture + Topotek1.

ARM Architecture's concept will be presented in a scale model, 'fly through' animation, designs and images.

Gold Coast Mayor Tom Tate said the exhibition would allow residents across the city to see a 'breath-taking design which represents the city's cultural coming of age'.

"This is our cultural future. It will be a heart for art, culture and civic celebration," Cr Tate said.

"While it will be built at Evandale, it will support and nurture arts, culture and creative enterprise right across the city.

"It will build creative capital, make the Gold Coast a must-visit cultural tourism destination, and generate new, local jobs for future generations of Gold Coasters.

"And with implementation of our new Culture Strategy, we now have a coordinated and confident vision for the city's cultural future."

The exhibition can be seen at Elanora Library during normal library opening hours, until Saturday 15 March and residents can provide comments and ideas through a feedback box.
