More fine tuning of speaker system to come

Due to unforeseen circumstances and unsuitable weather conditions, further intermittent testing of the Cultural Precinct's sound system will occur over the next few weeks.

To ensure the sound system is ready for performance ahead of completion next month, it is necessary to undertake testing at all volume levels. However, we will request that sound levels be lower if possible.

One of the world's best professional audio systems L'Acoustics has been installed in Stage 1 of the precinct's outdoor stage and concert lawn, which will be capable of hosting a wide range of concerts, civic and cultural events.

And when finished, it will need to look good and sound great.

On Thursday 16 November and Friday 17 November, acoustic engineers will be on-site to fine tune the system. There may be further testing during the next few weeks.

The sound system test will include a variety of music recordings and spoken word. The fine tuning will mean white noise and pink noise will be heard throughout the day. These sounds are similar to the steady crackling noise once heard from old televisions.

Effective testing means all volume levels in all situations and environmental scenarios. So at times it will be loud.

There is no site access to the public and all enquiries about the testing should be through the project team on 07 5581 7747. We appreciate your patience and cooperation while we make these final adjustments.

AT A GLANCE

What to expect: Music recordings followed by sound system fine tuning with white and pink noise. Volumes will vary throughout the day.

When: Thursday 16 and Friday 17 November 2017 and possibly future dates (weather and site conditions dependent).

Time: 7am – 6pm

Enquiries: 07 5581 7747

There will be no site access for the public. Please do not approach the construction site office or contractors who are busy with the final touches to construction.
